

IDENTITY

Reading Habits Neighborhood School Attending
Dreams/Goals Nationality Job History
IQ Score Places one has been Emotional State Appearance
Legal Status Style of Dress Club Membership
Gender Name Interest
Family of Origin Occupation Education
Personality Special Talents Ethnicities Sexual Orientation
Age Friendships Likes and Dislikes Victim
Favorite TV Show Religion Marital Status
Handicaps Secrets Health Status
Personal Hygiene Passions Financial Status
Social Status Primary Language Sibling(s)
Wizard(Muggle) Background and History Sport

“...people draw on some subset of these source of identity, and the resultant information about themselves contributions to the development and maintenance of a more or less stable, more or less coherent self-concept”

Hoyle, Kernis, Leary, & Baldwin, 1999

SELF CONCEPT

“This is who I am”